

Jorge Bustamante, Eugene Conley Professor of Sociology at the University of Notre Dame, gave a lecture at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies on May 4, 2010 as part of the Center's seminar series on Latin America co-sponsored by the Center for Latin American Studies. Bustamante's lecture was titled, "Extreme Vulnerability of Migrants: The Cases of the United States and Mexico."

Jorge Bustamante, Eugene Conley Professor of Sociology at the University of Notre Dame, gave a lecture at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies titled, "Extreme Vulnerability of Migrants: The Cases of the United States and Mexico." In addition to his position at the University of Notre Dame, Bustamante is professor and researcher at El Colegio de la Frontera Norte, the prominent Mexican institute for the study of border issues, of which he is also the founder.

Jorge Bustamante, Eugene Conley Professor of Sociology at the University of Notre Dame, gave a lecture at the Mershon Center titled "Extreme Vulnerability of Migrants: The Cases of the United States and Mexico." Bustamante has been quoted as a leading expert in the field of international migrations by most major newspapers in the United States. His visit to the Mershon Center for International Security Studies in May 4, 2010 was co-sponsored by the Center for Latin American Studies, the Department of Sociology, and the Collaborative Research Working Group on Migration, Transnationalism, and Border Politics.